WOULD MAINTAIN GUARD

Maintenance of a federal road guard to prevent movement of green corn on the cob from infested territory into clean areas, in order to protect Indiana's greatest farm crop from the devastating European corn borer, has begun in northern Indiana, Frank N. Wallace, state entomologist, announced today.

Thirty or more patrolmen are now on duty and this force will be augmented as the needs require, Wallace said.

Under an arrangement with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, cost of the road guard this year will be paid by the federal government from its corn borer fund, whereas last year this force was compensated from state funds.

Road guards, Wallace says, are stationed on all the main highways just outside the infested borer territory, and are charged with stopping and searching every automobile and vehicle to see that no green corn is moved from the stricken areas into clean areas. By this measure Wallace and his aides in the conservation department, warring against the borer for some two years, seek to slow up its march across the great corn belt of the nation. Guards will be in uniform, signs erected along the highways will apprise motorists and travelers why they are stopped, and the public is asked to cooperate with the guards to protect the country's great farm industry.

Since Indiana became host to this vicious farm pest some two years ago, farmers generally have cooperated with state and federal officials seeking to control it in such a way that its destructiveness will be held to a minimum. Few people endeavor to crash the quarantine line with corn shipments, and in the majority of cases where corn is detected in transit, is in cars of tourist campers unacquainted with the quarantine rules. Often a tourist car contains sufficient sweet corn to last the occupants for two or three days, when the cobs and shucks are discarded, and often the whole ear if it contains a worm, then the borer easily spreads Wallace says.

The state entomologist points out that in two years sixteen Indiana counties became infested with corn borer, and by reason the pest spreads, via the moth stage, from 30 to 50 miles each year, it is imperative that green corn movements be rigidly enforced. To date, due to prevention work and also the cleanup of fields in fall and winter, Indiana farmers have sustained no serious crop loss from the pest.

A. E. Dorsey Construction Co. was preparing to pave the wings on North Indiana street Friday and intended to pour the cement late Friday afternoon. After this is done the mixer will move to the south end of Indiana street and begin paving it.

Between two and three hundred people listened to the radio reception of the fight last night at the Franklin street garage. The reception was exceptionally clear and distinct.

DEER TRAILS AND ANCIENT OWL HAUNTS

mate them. There were limbs that were much larger than many have saw logs these days.

The interior of this massive trunk was rooted out, and in this vast cavity there lived a colony of owls—great horned owls, not the little fellows that quaver around on gloomy evenings. These birds were the origin of the creek's name. Their reverberating voices could be heard a mile through the woods.

Down on the ground, beneath the wide-spreading limbs, there was an Indian encampment.

When the shades of the evening would fall, the big owls up in the tree would hoot, and the Indian braves on the ground would whoop, so that, everything considered, it was a neighborhood not to be sought by nervous white folks—not after sunset, at least. Later, however, Theodore Crawley and others of his family grew to maturity not far away, and they show no evil effects of the environment, as is self-evident.

Indians South Of Limerdale

One of the Indian villages near Greencastle, not mentioned before this was located south of Limerdale on land on which John R. Miller of Greencastle, lived as a boy. It was close to the stream that flows through Allen-dale. Near the site of the old red-man's town there was a strongly flowing spring, and the stream was large enough to furnish many fish for the dusky anglers. Mr. Miller yet smiles when he speaks of the messes of sunfish which he himself took from its waters, in his bare foot days.

Mr. Miller found numerous Indian relics when he lived there.

PATIENTS AT LARGE AFTER HOSPITAL FIRE

the building yesterday is believed to have caused a short circuit in an electric light wire which caused the fire.

Erskine Young, night watchman, locked out of a window shortly after midnight, and saw one of the cupolas of the building aflame.

Young ran to the office of Dr. S. W. Farmer, superintendent, pounded on the locked door and finally aroused Dr. Farmer. The superintendent took one look at the blaze, towering above the central building, while 2-272 helpless patients covered in adjoining wings.

"Turn the patients out," he ordered. Keepers went through the building opening every cell, and the hundreds of patients, many of them clad only in night clothing or wrapped in sheets, fled out into the drizzling rain.

Memories of a similar disaster 55 years ago when many inmates were burned to death in their cells, prompted officers to hurry the patients from the building.

Many started dully at the flames, without comprehension, some laughed some wept and others threw themselves to the ground and slept.

Everywhere guards and officers guarded the crowd. In spite of their vigilance, many patients slipped away across the fields and along the roads to Nashville.

Konjola Restores His Health After A Year of Owl Misery.

MR. C. C. GILLMAN
"Konjola gave me such great relief from stomach trouble that I want others to know about it," said Mr. C. C.
Gillman, 1606 G. Avenue, Newcastle, Ind.

"My whole system was in a rundown condition for at least a year. It was necessary for me to be taking something all the time to get relief from indigestion pains and gas bloating. Quantities of gas around my heart caused palpitations and shortness of breath, and on account of constipation I suffered a great deal with headaches and dizzy spells. Every meal meant misery to me and I was at a loss to know what else to try for relief.

"A friend of mine was so sincere in his recommendation of Konjola that I gave it a trial. Now, I am sorry I didn't get this medicine right at the start. It went to the source of my trouble and restored my health in every way. All the miseries I suffered after meals are gone and I enjoy a new feeling of health over my whole system."

Konjola is sold in Greencastle at the Owl drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. —(Adv.)

CHAMP BATTERS RUGGED CHAL-

IN ELEVEN ROUNDS.

REFEREE STOPS BATTLE

Gene Tunney Scores Technical Knockout When Tom Heenev Reaches State of Collapse.

NEW YORK, July 27. (UP)—Gene Tunney is secure in his niche today among the great fighters of history.
A rebuilt Tunney, a Tunney with a punch sledged his way to victory last night over Tom Heenev, as stout hearted a boxer as ever waged a hopeless fight.

Referee Eddie Forbes stopped the bout after two minutes and 52 seconds of the eleventh round. Heenev was limp against the ropes, and Tunney was measuring him for a knockout. It would have been the first time in his career that the count of ten had been tolled over the challenger.

Heenev said he would carry the fight to Tunney and he did. Always he was lunging forward, flailing with his pudgy arms and taking two blows to land one. Heenev had only one punch—a looping right to the head.
Invariably he telegraphed it five seconds before it came across, by jock-eysing his legs into position and dropping his shoulder. When the punch finally arrived Tunney was not there.
There was nothing solid about Heenev as he stamped in the resin before the bell sounded for the first round. Tunney was by far the calmer of the two.

The champion apparently tossed the first round away deliberately to sound out his man. He was the Tunney of Philadelphia and Chicago, a faultless boxer.

The change came in the third round.
They were in a clinch when Tunney rested his head on Heenev's shoulder for a second and smiled as his eye roamed across the vacant seats. When the bell rang for the fourth round Tunney had become a puncher.

Heenev came charging out of his corner, his granite jaw stuck out to invite a right cross. Tunney aimed for the jaw and swung. Heenev duck-ed a trifle and the blow caught him on the nose. Blood trickled out, and for the first time the challenger stood still instead of lunging forward.

From then on Tunney never ran away. He stood still as Heenev came at him, mixing his rights to the head with murderous jabs to the body. All through the fourth and fifth rounds the champion was driving his right into Heenev's heart.

By the eighth round Heenev's left eye was closed and his face was smeared with blood. But he kept coming in.

He seldom found Tunney except in the clinches. Then Heenev hung on to Tunney helplessly, snorted blood from his battered nose and took more punishment. Splashes of crimson crept into the bulging muscles above his heart. Not once during the infighting did the challenger land a solid blow.

The climax came in the tenth round. They met in the center of the ring where Tunney found the wobbling Heenev an easy mark for a lightning one-two punch that drove the challenger to the ropes. Tom slumped down into a half crouch, his arms crossed over his chest. His chin sagged. Then the scholar got the better of the fighter in Tunney's makeup.

For three seconds he stood there with his arms at his side gazing at Heenev. A Dempsey would have been swarming over his man and driving in blows. But to Tunney the polishing off of Heenev was an unpleasant job.

Tunney came to life, spun Heenev into an upright position with a left to the chest and stepped in with his right fist ready. Coolly he marked his target and sent the blow across like a rocket. That punch travelled three feet, but it knocked Heenev three yards.

The challenger bounced on the canvas and rolled over once to land sprawled out on his back. His eyes were glassy and he was gulping for breath. Tunney started toward a neutral corner only to be stopped by the bell.

As Heenev came out of his corner for the next round, he automatically started that ceaseless lunging forward. He had only a vague idea where Tunney was, and his sole thought was to keep plodding ahead until he found him. Heenev does not carry a reverse gear.

His first knowledge of where Tunney was came when he felt a familiar jolt at his heart, followed instantly by a sledge-hammer blow against his jaw.

His arms were loose at his side and he was taking it on the chin, head and body when the referee stopped the bout.

By so doing he struck a lie to earth—the long standing criticism that he was a punchless champion.
Tunney promised a knockout, and a large part of the world laughed. The hances are that the citizens of Glasgow, New Zealand, where Heenev is known and appreciated have a healthy respect today for the punch that Gene Tunney found somewhere near Speculator, N. Y.

Congress at the ringside was that he first round was even, the second was Tunney's, the third Heenev's with all the rest going to Tunney.

MIX AGAIN SCORES
IN NEW PRODUCTION

Once more Tom Mix, ace of Western, brings to the screen a thrilling story of the early nineties, replete with startling episodes and magnificent scenic efforts.

"Painted Post," his newest release for Fox Films, opened at the Granada Theatre tonight night. Mix can always be depended upon to bring the unusual to the screen and his latest effort is no exception to the rule.

His horsemanship, his roping, his dexterity with his six-shooters, together with an intriguing plot and splendid cast, to this reviewer's mind is the last word in Westerns.

The story of "Painted Post" deals with a troublesome gang of thieves who have reduced a once prosperous community to poverty with their daring raids. The sheriff is handicapped by unforeseen obstacles. However, he handles the situation that arises in a manner that only Mix can express.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS OF RUSSELL TOWNSHIP, PUTNAM COUNTY, INDIANA

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned Trustee and Advisory Board of Russell Township, Putnam County, Indiana, that said officials contemplate meeting an emergency and determining the expenditure of more money for the year, 1928 than was set out in the published budget for said year; and will on the 6 day of Aug., 1928, at 7:30 o'clock P. M. at the office of A. M. McGaughey, Trustee of said Township, consider and determine the expenditures necessary to meet such emergency.

The amounts proposed to be appropriated and the purposes for which said proposed appropriations are to be made, are as follows:

Tuition Fund
$7700.00 in the Tuition Fund for payment of teachers; Special School Fund
$250.00 Repair of Buildings and care of Ground, $350.00 School Furniture and supplies, $250.00 School Supplies,
Bond Funds
$250.00 Bonds.
Tax payers have a right to be heard thereon.

Ten or more taxpayers in such municipal corporation, other than those who pay poll tax only, and who are affected by such additional appropriations and who may feel aggrieved thereby, may file a petition with the county Auditor of Putnam County within ten days after such additional appropriations shall have been determined upon, setting forth their objections thereto and facts showing that the proposed additional expenditures are unnecessary, unwise and excessive, as the case may be.

Witness our hands this 23 day of July, 1928.

A. M. McGaughey, Trustee Russell Township.
Romulus Boyd,
Floyd Gardner,
Oscar Stutesman,
Advisory Board Russell Township.

LIMA STREETS PROVE PUZZLE TO STRANGERS

EACH BLOCK HAS DIFFERENT NAME, THEREBY TAXING MEMORY OF TOURISTS.

LIMA, Peru, July 26. (UP)—A stranger who tries to find his way around Lima immediately gets lost. Every block downtown has a different name, and there is an additional name for each street. Furthermore, when the city was renumbered some years ago, many houses retained the old numbers and simply added new and different ones.

In a list of street names ten times as long as that of the ordinary city of 250,000, Lima has many peculiar designations, dating from colonial days. There is one block called "Little Fishes," where these used to be sold; another "The Divorces," where these ladies apparently lived in this highly religious town and "The Soul of Gaspar."

Almost all the saints are represented. There is one "Drugstore of St. Peter," and a "Coach-house of St. Sebastian."

The animal kingdom has one block streets named "The Lions," "The Tiger," "The Buzzards," and "Little Buzzards," not to mention Duck, Rooster, Cat, and Mice streets. Among plants, there are blocks named for Oranges, Pomegranates, Limes, Lettuce, and Watermelons.

Recalling old market days, we find streets named for Button Sellers, Swordsmiths, Scribes, Dyers and the Buttery. There must have been many unfortunates then, because the block names include the Helpless, Barefooted, Afflicted; also Rags, Bitterness and Charity. One can go from the Street of the Poor to Money street; from Health to the Little Cemetery, and back again to the Miracle.

"Matamoras" block means "he kills Moors" and "Mata Siete", another, is "he kills seven."

We expect to have a store full of nice eats for you Saturday. Wetz for the best in eats.

BODY IDENTIFIED

HUNTINGTON, Ind., July 26.—A woman's body found nearly nude at the edge of a lane a short distance north of Roanoke a week ago yesterday was positively identified here today as Mrs. Carl Ballard, wife of a wealthy restaurant owner of Muskegon, Mich. The woman apparently had been murdered by several blows on the head.

The identification was made by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall, Detroit, Mrs. Hall is Mrs. Ballard's sister.

Mrs. Hall said that Mrs. Ballard had left her husband and had lived at a Detroit rooming house with a man whom Mr. and Mrs. Hall knew as "Mickey." On the evening of July 15, two days before the body was found here, Mrs. Ballard called Hall and informed him that she intended to return to her husband at Muskegon, but that she didn't intend to "hurry" in doing so. That is the last time she has communicated with any of her relatives.

Carl (Gust) Ballard, husband of the missing woman, came here Saturday after the body was found and at-
